The game is played by three teams - each team has a celebrity and the other person can be their friend or family. It is a team game and consists of four rounds. Before the actual games begin, they have a warm-up round known as Javu Mittai. In this, Jagan starts with a random word. Each team must say a binding word, that is, if team A says a word that connects to the one told by Jagan, then team B should say a word to fit in with what was told by team C. This continues until each team had a few chances. However, this is not included for points. [1] Gameplay format Round 1: Two by two In this round, two photos are shown. The team has 30 seconds to guess common word/homonym of the images. The words sound the same, but may have different spellings or slight variations in how they are pronounced. Each team must answer three questions in this round. If a team is unable to respond in the given time, other teams get a chance to answer. Bonus points are also rewarded... Round 2: Joint family In this round, a word is broken down into different images and the participants must find the answer by stringing the images together. Each image means a separate word. More than one word is image is given and the teams have to guess with in mind that only the pictures together will make sense. Also in this round, participants must guess four words in 30 seconds. Round 3: Tent Kottai In this round, negative markings to teams that press the buzzer and give wrong/no answer. Altogether, there are six guesses and the team pressing the buzzer first will respond. An advantage is that the photos also indicate what the team should guess, that is, the name of a person or a country or a movie or a song etc. Round 4: Panchalthariram is the decisive round for which team is the best connector. It gives a total of five photos one by one and each photo can be linked to a word. Jagan will inform the team of what they're guessing, just like in round three. With that in mind and also the pictures of the teams can guess. The lesser lesser of the pictures the team used to guess the right word, the more is the number of points. The total point for this round is 50. Remake The show has been remade again in Telugu language and Kannada language as Connexion aired on MAA TV and Star Suvarna and also remade in Sri Lanka's Sinhala language Channel.
